Reaping the Rewards

As bankers anticipated serious bonus bonanzas in the first quarter of 2006, it could only mean one thing for the property market – a major boost in business.

Soaring oil prices and continued buoyancy in financial markets have produced a healthy share in the profit pot. Where to spend the money? On property, obviously. Which means it's an excellent time to sell. Since the turn of the year demand is already looking very strong, especially for new developments. Foreign investors with whom Frasers have long-established connections are also still very much a major factor in the market.

"Our buyers are hungry to find the right projects and it also appears that buy-to-let demand is on the increase," reports sales director Richard Levene. "Watch this space for plenty of new developments due to be released through the company in locations worldwide."

Clients of Fraser & Co were entertained at the annual NSPCC Cinderella Ball at the Savoy Hotel in the Strand. The usual menu of eating, drinking and dancing was par for the course but guests were also entertained by magicians, caricaturists, tarot readers, angelic healers, a casino, a live band, a jazz band as well as a disco. The evening of course had a serious meaning and we understand that £100,000 was raised for charity.
